Allan Tranter

Founding Director/Director Place,
Activation And Entrepreneurship

Allan is the Founding Director of Creating Communities Australia, the company he formed in 1992. His highly sought after thought leadership in current global and local trends as well as his expertise in social capital and cohesion has made him a valued speaker at many forums and events. Allan's down to earth, practical approach lead by his experience and advanced depth of knowledge in strategy, community development, marketing and innovation have contributed to bottom-line improvements for some of Australia's leading businesses and communities.

Allan is a sociologist and anthropologist with expertise in social planning, recreation, economic and community development. A highly experienced facilitator, Allan is regularly called upon to bring disparate parties together. He is regularly engaged to provide solutions in the planning for, and implementation of, projects that address the more significant issues that confront our society, such as ageing, multiculturalism, Aboriginal communities, youth enterprise and driving local economies.

Heavily involved in urban renewal schemes for more than a decade, he has led projects in metropolitan suburbs such as Northbridge, Coolbellup and Karawara as well as instigating and overseeing projects in regional areas such as Broome, South Hedland, Bunbury and Armadale. He has also played major roles in many joint venture greenfield projects including Wellard, Brighton and Golden Bay.

As former Director at the WA Department of Sport and Recreation, he has assisted numerous local and State governments in strategically aligning community projects. Currently the Chair for Nature Play WA, Allan has been on the board of numerous companies including the Urban Development Institute of Australia (UDIA), and the WA Technology Precinct.
